

The Beacon CE Primary School – Behaviour & Attitudes Curriculum

The Beacon Way

Our behaviour curriculum is centred around creating a positive environment and culture that fosters positive relationships between all members of our school community – we refer to this as ‘The Beacon Way’. We believe that the explicit teaching of outstanding behaviours and attitudes will enable pupils to make more informed decisions to become the very best version of themselves. Nurturing qualities like kindness, resilience, respect, and responsibility develops positive attitudes that improve students’ ability to learn, collaborate, and face challenges with confidence. Learning these behaviours early sets children up for future success, not only academically but in life, as they learn to communicate effectively, manage emotions, and build strong, respectful relationships.

The Beacon Way can be adhered to by following our ‘5 Bs of The Beacon’ which make up our code of conduct. These are explained below:

The Beacon CE Primary School – Behaviour & Attitudes Curriculum

We believe in the mantra of ‘making it easy to behave well’. To do this, we have a clear set of routines and expectations that are explicitly taught, and re-taught, to pupils. Pupils are given regular opportunities to practise these, and adults reinforce positive behaviours that are shown through verbal praise and awarding Dojos. Below is an outline of when pupils are introduced to the expected behaviours and what they are.

Trauma Informed Approach

At Beacon, our focus is on a relational environment and the very culture and ethos of the setting. It requires emotionally regulated adults who can provide essential calming and containment for a child when they are overwhelmed by an event, a situation or their feelings. The components of the Trauma and Mental Health-Informed Schools model are supported by evidence-based research showing positive change in well-being and mental health through Protect, Relate, Regulate and Reflect.

Protect It is the foundation on which everything else depends: the ability to learn without the fear and without fear of being shamed in order to relate to others, engage in learning, in peace. In protect, the focus is not only on the physical environment, but the relational environment and very culture and ethos of the setting, both at home and school. It requires emotionally regulated adults who can provide essential calming and containment for a child when they are overwhelmed by an event, a situation or their feelings	Relate As human beings we are wired for relationship. The ability to form meaningful relationships is fundamental to mental health and happiness. It's the quality of contact we have with other people that is arguably the most important determining factor in our quality of life. We can only truly develop ourselves through relationships with others. Positive relational experiences with our children means meeting the child in pain and meeting the child in joy.
Regulate There are 4 key principles to support a child to regulate their feelings and behaviour. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Stay with the child 2. Listen to the child 3. Affect labelling – this simply means help the child to find words to describe their feelings 4. Mental state talk – When they have big feelings, talk them through it. 	Reflect Reflecting is about having conversations with a child that support their emotional and mental health. It facilitates the child to make sense of their life, to develop a language for their emotions and a coherent narrative that makes sense of what they feel. It supports them to understand their thoughts, feelings, bodily sensations and reactions. In making sense of their experience with the support of an emotionally available adult, who helps them communicate their underlying feelings, they can identify new options and strategies for ways forward with both their hopes and their difficulties.
